Infrastructure as Key for Wellbeing Economy Development in Africa

African countries face unprecedented challenge of defining a future development pathway in a resource- and carbon-constrained world. Africa's infrastructure gap is enormous. Leaving this infrastructural deficit unaddressed for so long or addressing it in a business-as-usual way will pose significant threats to the region's development and to the global sustainability effort. Development of transformational infrastructure for Wellbeing Economy by capturing and utilising the available opportunities provides a strong basis for fulfilling the aspirations of Agenda 2063 and African countries transition to an inclusive, climate resilient and resource efficient economies.

This session deliberates on existing major opportunities and challenges in developing transformational infrastructure for Wellbeing economy in Africa.

Join Desta Mebratu, Extraordinary Professor at Centre for Complex Systems in Transition (CST), Stellenbosch University and CEO of the African Transformative Leapfrogging Advisory Services (ATLAS).
